

single one previously cherry-picked I was able to visit still.

Nonetheless, that's a small price to pay for the self-imposed and very much liberating freedom from the usual show pressure. Less pictures and walk in favour of more talk filled my review timetable for several months in the process and – due to local hence utmost easy logistics – a generous number of products was delivered from the show to my place directly. That's why in the upcoming weeks you'll see a lot of the usual hard content this site is based on instead of yet another lengthy report up above. This is the most valuable upshot of my attitude this time around and – after taking into account how effective it proved to be – I strongly think that it's here to stay. 'Till next time!